

Tell Me About Yourself

"Good morning! My name is Nourhen Hachem, I am 23 years old and I am from Sousse, Tunisia. I am a customer service professional with over three years of experience in hospitality, travel, and retail. I started as a Concierge at Hotel Royal Salem, where I welcomed guests and ensured every stay was comfortable and memorable. I then joined a travel agency, where I helped clients plan their trips and handled last-minute situations calmly and professionally. Currently, I work as a Sales Assistant at Bershka, where I deliver high-quality service in a fast-paced environment every day. These experiences have taught me how to remain calm under pressure, communicate effectively, and ensure that every customer feels valued, safe, and comfortable. I genuinely enjoy working with people from different cultures and backgrounds, and I take pride in delivering exceptional service in every situation. That is why I am highly motivated to grow within such an international and professional environment as Emirates."

Why Emirates"

I want to join Emirates because it represents excellence, professionalism, and diversity. The airline is known worldwide for its outstanding service and high standards, and I truly admire how it connects people and cultures across the globe. I am passionate about customer service and I love working with people from different backgrounds. For me, Emirates is not just an airline — it is a symbol of quality, innovation, and global connection. I would be proud to grow within such a multicultural environment and contribute to its reputation for excellence. Representing Emirates is not just a job for me — it is a responsibility I take seriously and proudly every single day."

Difficult customer

"While working as a Sales Assistant at Bershka, a customer approached me feeling very frustrated because an item she had been looking for was completely unavailable in our store. I listened to her carefully without interrupting, acknowledged her frustration, and sincerely apologised for the inconvenience. I then offered her several alternative options that matched her style and preferences. I also personally checked our system to see if the item was available in another nearby store, and I provided her with the exact location and contact details so she could get it easily. The customer truly appreciated the effort I made for her. She left the store fully satisfied, thanked me warmly, and even said she would come back to shop with us again."

Working Under Pressure

"During the sales period at Bershka, the store was extremely crowded and unfortunately two of my colleagues fell sick and had to go home early. Suddenly, my one remaining colleague and I were responsible for the entire store floor alone. Every customer needed assistance at the same time — finding items, different sizes, different sections. The pressure was intense and I could feel the stress building around me. However, I took a deep breath and quickly organised myself. I divided the store floor between myself and my colleague so we each had a clear area to cover. I prioritised the customers who needed the most urgent help, communicated calmly and warmly with everyone, and made sure no customer felt ignored. I kept a smile on my face throughout, even though it was one of the most demanding shifts I had experienced. By the end of the day, we had managed the entire floor successfully without a single complaint. My manager acknowledged our effort and thanked us personally. That day taught me that staying calm, organised, and positive under pressure is what truly makes the difference — and I believe that is exactly the mindset Emirates looks for in its cabin crew."
